

The Smart Cities Symposium Prague 2015 organized by The Czech Technical University, Faculty of Transportation Sciences jointly with EATIS - Euro American Association on Telematics and Information Systems

Dear Colleagues,

We would like to invite you to the Smart Cities Symposium Prague 2015 (SCSP2015) that will take place in Prague, Czech Republic, 24–25 June 2015.

The Smart Cities Symposium Prague 2015 will be a forum for exchanging ideas and best practices in the field of Smart cities. The scope of the symposium will be multidisciplinary and will cover a wide range of topics, from the system point of view, through data mining and data processing, smart grids, up to multi-agent systems and other soft computing approaches.

The objective of this symposium is to define the research, applied research and technology development issues that will catalyze the Smart Cities transformation. The results should be based on the theoretical backgrounds, but aim on usage of best practices for real world applications.

The symposium will appear on the IEEE Conference Search and Call for Papers listing.

- The key areas cover:
1. System approach to the Smart Cities transformation
 2. Smart grid components (smart grids, ITS, telecommunications, data centers and others)
 3. Information & data processing, algorithms, agents, simulation and prediction
 4. Smart cars, driver-car interaction, HMI
 5. Best practices for the transformation into Smart Cities
